

Prepare to be transported to the magical world of the North Pole just days before Christmas. Guiseley Theatre has been transformed into a snowy peaked magical wonderland – where every part of the multi-tiered stage has hidden surprises that will delight and thrill their family audiences.

This original piece of theatre was written by cast member Lee Phillips, and directed by his son and fellow actor, Jacob Phillips. Chloe Lawson joins the talented pair, playing all the other characters in the play – from a penguin who wishes to find the perfect gift for his wife, to the irate bus driver on the Number 33 bus (and let's not forget the cameo from the big man himself!). The play is fast paced with larger than life characters, ensuring it will be a hit with audiences both young and old.

The spectacle certainly has something for everyone, and offers a wonderful alternative to the traditional Christmas Panto. With confetti cannons and theatrical magic throughout, all audiences will be entertained as they share with us this poetic tale of friendship, self-belief, tolerance ... and a little bit of Christmas magic!

Codswallop Theatre Company have excelled themselves this time! This young, dynamic, company use their trademark array of comic style props and set, but with this production we see a real sophistication and challenge in their vision for bringing together sound, light and stage craft in order to truly dazzle us. A must see production!
